Click here for full description.Chemoimmunotherapy of refractory chronic myeloid leukemia: a phase I study with interferon alpha. A phase I study was conducted to determine the maximum tolerated dose, the dose-limiting toxicities, and the pharmacokinetic behavior of interferon alpha in combination with cytarabine (ARA-C) in chronic myeloid leukemia (CML). Twenty-six patients with Philadelphia chromosome positive CML were included in the study. A median of 3 courses of ARA-C and 12 weeks of treatment with interferon alpha were administered in the initial phase. Interferon alpha was administered weekly at three dose levels (1.5 micrograms/m2, 3.0 micrograms/m2, and 5.0 micrograms/m2). The dose-limiting toxicity was identified as dose-dependent reversible mucositis in 12 of 26 patients. The optimum dose for the combination was 3.0 micrograms/m2 interferon alpha administered for 12 weeks. The efficacy of the combination therapy was evaluated in 17 patients receiving this dose level and was demonstrated in a partial remission in two patients, a minor response in two patients, and stable disease in five patients with a median duration of 6.0 months (range, 3-10 months). One of the patients with stable disease has been followed for 11 months without therapy. Of six patients with an accelerated phase at presentation, three achieved a cytogenetic response and one achieved a minor response, whereas three failed to respond to the treatment. Toxicities of the combination consisted of constitutional symptoms and laboratory abnormalities such as leukopenia, thrombocytopenia, anemia, and anorexia. The combination therapy with 3.0 micrograms/m2 interferon alpha is well-tolerated and highly active in CML in patients with Philadelphia chromosome positivity. The response rate is higher in patients with stable disease compared to those with accelerated phase of CML. Further studies with combinations of lower doses of interferon alpha and lower dose levels of ARA-C may give a better outcome in CML.I find it ironic to be driving a $38,000 truck with a $16,000 car and a $13,000 mobile computer system on board. But I find it fun. It's not like I have to take a long drive to pick up supplies and it doesn't have to be
